How to stay human when AI does everything

(the old-school way)

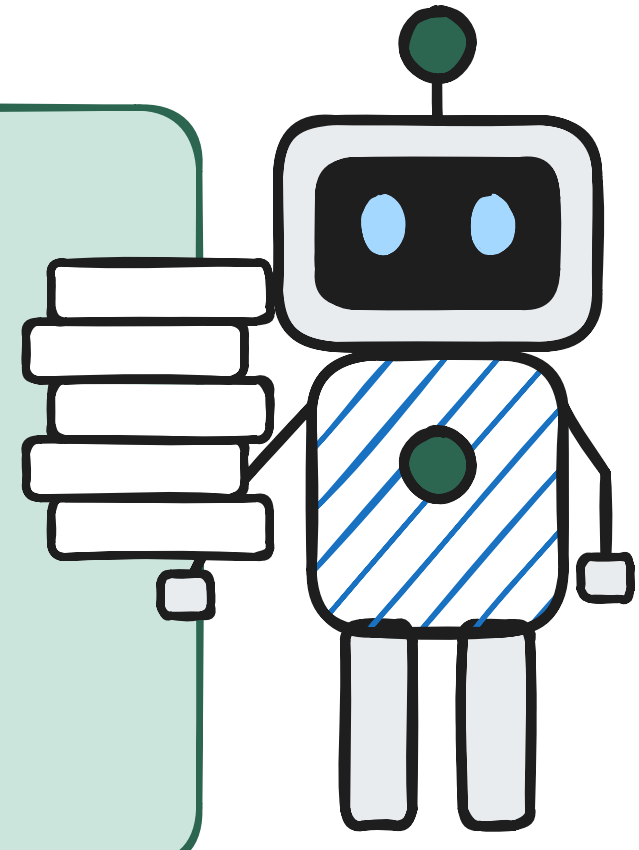

AI is great. I use it every day.

But I don't want it doing my thinking.

the deal:

AI does the busywork. I do the thinking.

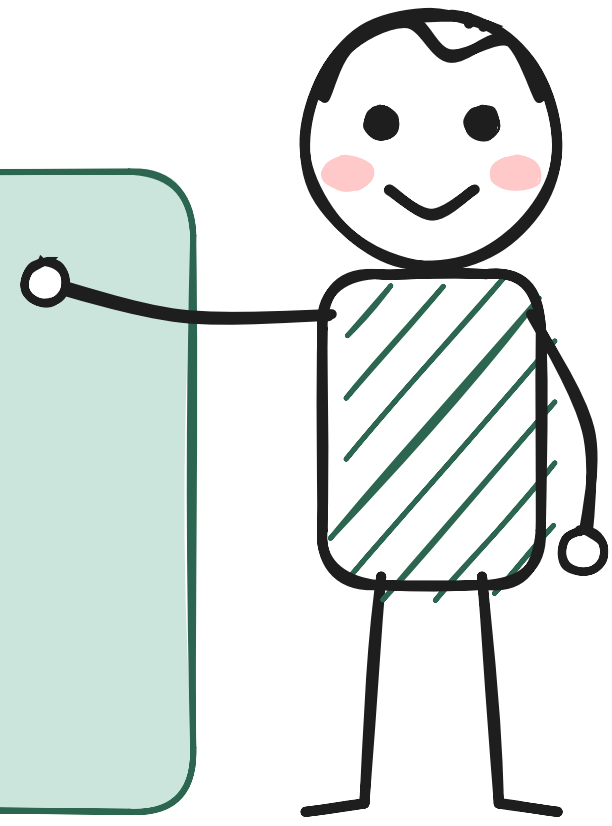

1

Write the first draft yourself

That's where you find out what you think.

try this:

Write it messy. Let AI polish after.

2

Sit with the problem

Give your own brain the first turn.

try this:

Ask yourself: what's really wrong here?

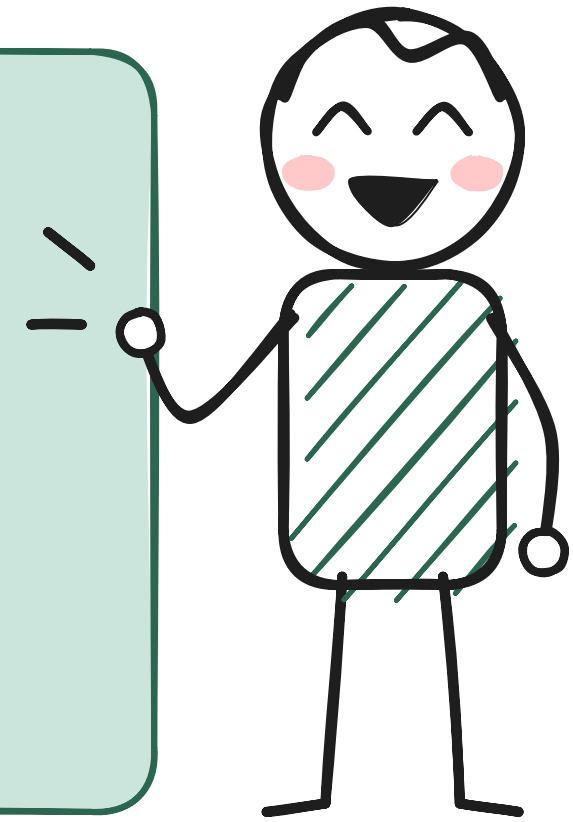

3

Talk to a real person

An expert, a peer,
someone who's been there.

try this:

Ask what they learned the hard way.

4

Take notes by hand

In meetings, on calls, while you read.

try this:

Even if AI is recording,
write your own.

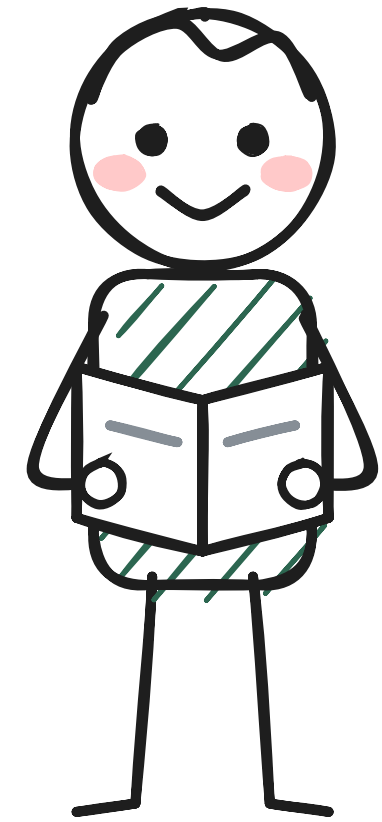

5

Read the whole thing

A summary gives you the point, not the thinking.

try this:

Pick one piece and read it start to finish.

6

Let it be imperfect

Imperfect is what makes it human.

try this:

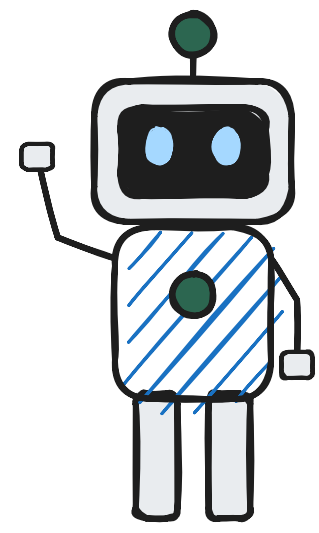

Keep your words, your quirks, your rough edges.

Use AI.
Just don't stop thinking.

you

are still the one who decides

Which one will you try this week?

1. Write it yourself
2. Sit with it
3. Talk to a person
4. Notes by hand
5. Read it all
6. Be imperfect
